KING JOHN I OF SAXONY.

John Nepomuck Maria Joseph, the late King of Saxony, was the son of Duke Maximihan of Saxony, and the Prince Caroline of Parma. The Saxon dynasty is one of the oldest reigning families of Europe. At the beginhing of the tenth century it gave an Emperor Germany, and subsequently spread into numerous branches. The royal house of Saxony belongs to the younger or Albertine line. shile the elder er Ernesting line is now represented by several merely ducal families of Ger-

The late King was born on the 12th of December, 1801. In early life be manifested a passion for literary pursuits, being especially versed in the literature of Italy. While still a buth he prepared a creditable metrical transation of the first ten cantos of Dante's Inferno. He subsequently completed a translation of the entire Divina Commedia, which was published at Leipsic in three volumes, 1839-1849, under the nom de plume of "Philalethes."

This literary performance has been regarded by competent critics as the best translation of the Divine Comedy that has ever appeared in the German language. For several years past he has been at work upon a translation of Shakspeare, and of the modern British and American poets, but by his express direction none of those works were to be given to the pubac until after his death. From the year 1824 he acted as President of the Society of Antiquarians of Saxony, and in 1852-53 presided over the German Historical and Antiquarian Seelety. His culture extended also into the domain of art, and he was one of the best critics in that department in Germany.

Early in life he also entered upon a political cateer becoming at the age of 20 an attache of the Munistry of Finance at Dresden. It this field of labor he attained the highest position, reting from the head of the department in 1531, to assume the command of the National Gard. As a Prince of the blood royal he ocomied the foremost place in the upper chamber of the Saxony Parliament, in which body he evinced much ability.

On the 9th of August, 1865, he ascended the drone as successor to his brother King Frederick Augustus II. On his ascension he adoptacting in conjunction with Austria, and in opposition to all schemes of national reform and berman unity. Subsequently, however, he appoved and authorized some very wise ameliorathe in the internal government of his king-

Is June, 1866, during the struggle between Pressa on the one side and Austria and the other South German States on the other, his territory was invaded by the Prussians. He was unable to make any stand against the intaders, and on October 21st of the same year the King signed a treaty by which he agreed to pay Prussia an indemnity of $7,500,000, and to ade the only fortress which he possessed—the impregnable Koeigstein (King's Rock). Placei thus at the mercy of Prussia, Saxony soon af er entered the North German Confederation to the army of which it contributed a force of about 25,000 men. the Saxon troops took an active part in the war against France, 1870 '71, under the leadership of the Crown Prince, who now ascends the throne. When the tide of war turned so strongy in layor of Germany that the King of Bavaia was led to propose the consolidation of all he German States and the elevation of the russian King to the imperial dignity, King John did not attempt to create a reaction, but December 9, 1870, signified his acquiescence in the project. On November 21, 1822, the he King married the Princess Amelia Augusta wighter of King Maximilian I, of Bavaria. he Crown Prince Frederick Augustus Al-

Duke of Saxony and heir apparent, who succeeds his father on the throne, was on on April 23, 1828, and in 1853 was marned to a daughter of Gustavus Vasa. He led the Saxon contingent in the recent war against France, his troops taking part in the operations which reduced Paris. On the occasion of their triumphal entry into Dresden, after the war, duy 11, 1871, it was announced that the Emperor William had made their commander a fold marshal of the Empire. Soon after, the Vzar of Russia also commended his gallantry Flooring.

by conferring upon him the honorary title of NOS. 29 and 31 NORTH WATER STREET.

COMFORT FOR LOAFERS. - [From the Washlazion Star, October 30. | - This morning Poareman Dyson, of the Sixth precinct, reported to the station that there was "a lamp-post on hte on the corner of Seventh and I streets. Leut Eckloff, after a critical inspection of the complainant to ascertain if he was not drunk, sked him what he meant, when turning about he presented to the gaze of his questioner a streak of singed overcoat extending from collar to tail; while at the same time a series of quirus of his person with a rueful countetakee, convinced those present that he had been accomfortably warmed up. Lieut. Eckloff with others proceeded to the place indicated, and found the iron lamp post nearly red hot. On further investigation it was discovered that a hole had beed drilled through one side to the interior, and looking through this a blaze of fire was seen rushing up through the hollow fart of the post with a buzzing sound. Attached to the lamp post was a letter box, which has also quite hot. It appears that the undersround joint at the foot of the post had sprung bleak from the carelessness of the laborers in deging on the street improvement, and that the gas escaping through the post had, by ome means, become ignited, possibly by some unger lighting his pipe by striking a match on the post. Policeman Dyson says that after he zot singed, leaning up against it, his curiosi-I led him to keep an eye on others, and he and the satisfaction of seeing several men ap-Houch the post for a comfortable lean or talk and suddenly dance about and snap their fin-Firs with pain. One inebriated individual on eaching it jumped about twice his length and webs headlong into the gutter. SOMEBODY in a Georgia Court "applauded," whereupon the judge (we quote from the Grifin News) indignantly remarked: "Now, dry at up; I will let you know this is no meeting of exuberating your enthusiasm; this court stall be respected at the risk of outraging the th commandment to the constitution, and if y u open your fly-trap or pat a-pat with them sumber tourteen brogans of yours agin I will send you to jail for thirty days, where you will teman without the benefit of a damnum obsque
